Senior Counsel Steve Vieux moderated the keynote fireside chat at the California Lawyers Association's Golden State Institute, featuring California Supreme Court Chief Justice Patricia Guerrero. Their discussion explored how artificial intelligence is reshaping the legal landscape and the future of antitrust enforcement.

As covered by Law360 in "Top Calif. Judge Warns Attys on AI, Eyes Antitrust Changes," Chief Justice Guerrero noted that "AI tools hold promise for improving court efficiency, but attorneys must be mindful of the ethical and evidentiary challenges they pose." The Chief Justice also noted that state antitrust law could extend beyond the contours of federal antitrust law, reminding the audience that the state's Supreme Court has said in the past that California's Cartwright Act is broader in range and deeper in reach.

Bartko was proud to sponsor this year's Institute. Read the full Law360 article here.
